Little DOT and her UNCLE DASH

I'M SURE DISAPPOINTED IN MY OLD SCHOOL! THEY KNEW HOW MUCH I WANTED THAT FOOTBALL COACHING JOB—AND THEY GAVE IT TO SOMEONE ELSE!

BUT LOTS OF OTHER COLLEGES WANT YOU TO COACH FOR THEM, UNCLE DASH!

THAT'S TRUE! BUT I WOULD HAVE LOVED TO COACH AT HALYARD!

MAYBE AFTER YOU GET EXPERIENCE, YOUR SCHOOL WILL HIRE YOU!

MAYBE! WELL, ANYHOW I'VE GOT MY FIRST JOB INTERVIEW COMING UP! I'VE GOT TO GO UP TO BEDLAM COLLEGE!

BEDLAM?! WE HAVE RELATIVES UP THERE!

GREAT! THEN PERHAPS DOT WOULD LIKE TO COME WITH ME!

WONDERFUL, UNCLE DASH! I'VE NEVER BEEN TO A COLLEGE CAMPUS BEFORE!

SOON... BE SURE TO LOOK UP AUNT SWEET, DOT!

SAY "HELLO" FOR ME TO YOUR UNCLE DEAN AND AUNT LUSHUS!

WHAT KIND OF A PLACE IS BEDLAM COLLEGE, UNCLE DASH?

IT RATES HIGH SCHOLASTICALLY, DOT!

BUT IT HASN'T HAD A GOOD ATHLETIC RECORD FOR YEARS!

MAYBE YOU CAN CHANGE ALL THAT--

HEH-HEH! SO THEY'LL HAVE A LOW SCHOLASTIC RECORD AND A GOOD FOOTBALL TEAM?

OF COURSE NOT, SILLY!

IN A FEW HOURS...

BEDLAM COLLEGE

GOLLY, IT'S A PRETTY PLACE, UNCLE DASH!

SAY, FELLER, CAN YOU TELL ME WHERE YOUR ATHLETIC DEPARTMENT IS?

GOSH, I DON'T KNOW IF WE HAVE ONE!

DON'T YOU EVEN KNOW THAT YOU HAVE A FOOTBALL TEAM?

REALLY? IF IT'S LIKE LAST YEAR'S TEAM, I WOULDN'T BET ON THEM IN A GAME OF HOPSCOTCH!

THIS STADIUM IS RUN DOWN, BUT WITH A GOOD TEAM...

WHAT TEAM? I COME HERE BECAUSE IT'S A NICE QUIET PLACE TO STUDY!

I WOULDN'T WANT TO COACH WHERE THE STUDENTS' MORALE IS SO LOW!

LITTLE DOT in THE SPOTLIGHT

The group was excited. Dress rehearsals are so much like the real performance. Some of the cast were slightly nervous. Things weren't going too well, mostly because of Dot.

"No, Dot! Matilda is center stage now," said Miss Sully, the director of the school's dramatic club.

Dot smoothed her maid's uniform, straightened her cap and moved back.

Matilda gave Dot a look and then turned her head away.

The rehearsal continued. Jimmy Pearce made his entrance and was saying his first lines when Dot appeared beside him.

"Dot Polka, step aside. You simply cannot be in the way while Jim is telling the audience why he dislikes the new boy in town. It is important that everyone understands, at the beginning of the play, that Peter, the new boy, used to be the best student, the greatest baseball player and the most liked boy in Hilltown. Jimmy, whose name is Tommy in this play, was from Hilltown, too, and knew Peter there.

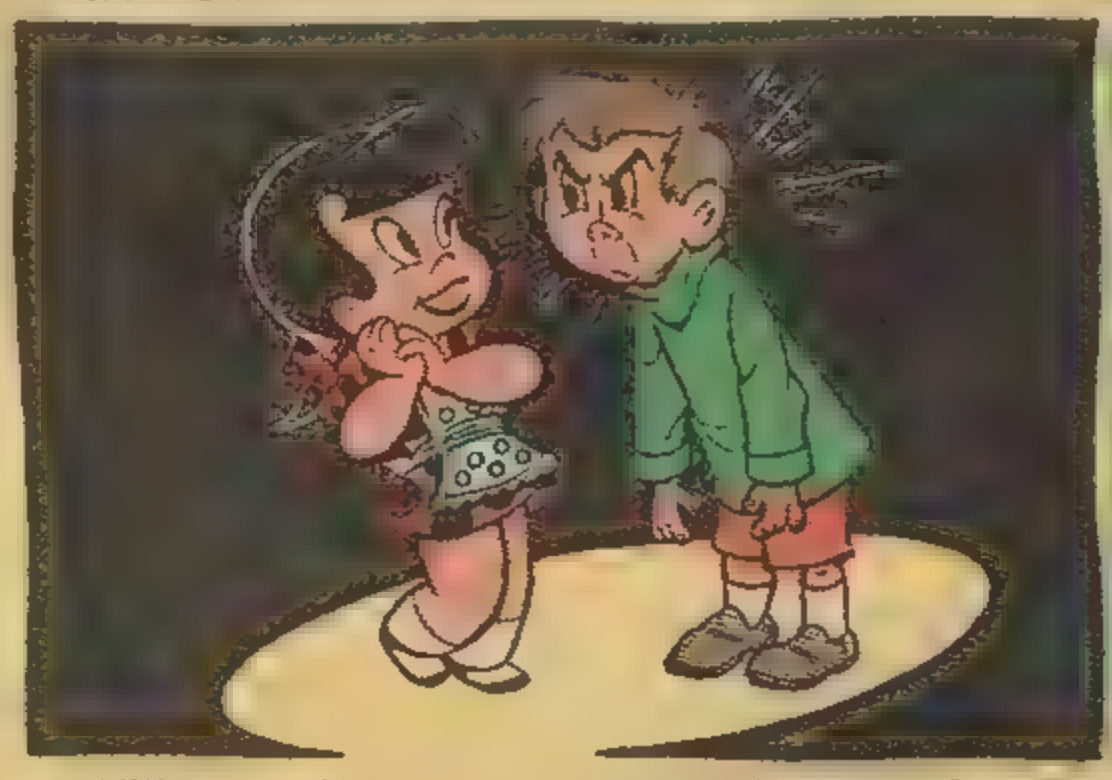
"Now, Jimmy lives here in Arondale. He has the top grades, is manager of the baseball team and has dozens of friends. Jimmy is afraid that Peter will take his place now that he has moved here, too.

"You see, Dot, you must stay out of the way. All attention must be given to Jimmy as he tells about this situation," Miss Sully explained.

Jimmy didn't know his lines very well. He ummed and ahhed a lot. While Miss Sully was coaching him, Dot did little twirling ballet steps to the front of the stage.

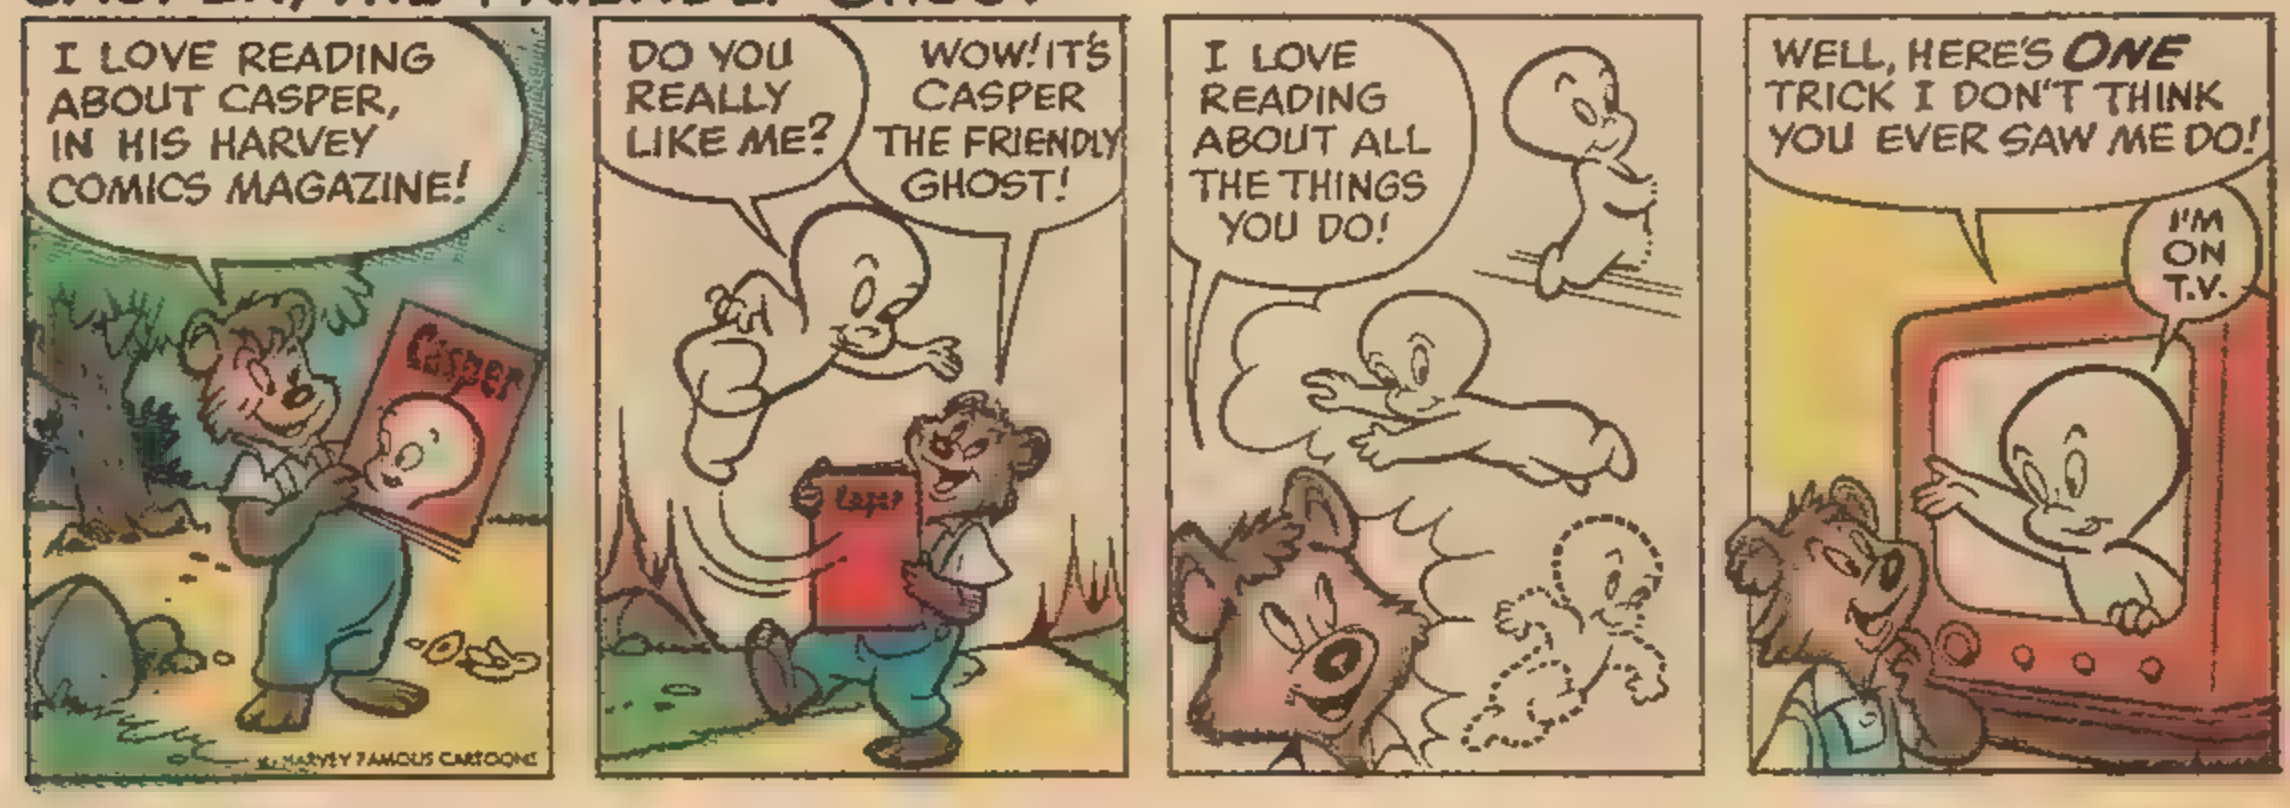
"Why are you being such a problem today, Dot?" Miss Sully asked angrily.

"I honestly don't know," replied Dot. "I don't mean to be."



"You said you would like to be on stage as much as possible, Dot, but that you didn't want a large part in this play. That's why we cast you as the maid. We even gave you a black and white polka dotted apron to wear with your uniform.

CASPER, THE FRIENDLY GHOST



I LOVE READING ABOUT CASPER, IN HIS HARVEY COMICS MAGAZINE!
Casper
DO YOU REALLY LIKE ME?
WOW! IT'S CASPER THE FRIENDLY GHOST!
I LOVE READING ABOUT ALL THE THINGS YOU DO!
WELL, HERE'S ONE TRICK I DON'T THINK YOU EVER SAW ME DO!
I'M ON T.V.

I don't think anyone ever heard of a maid with a polka dotted apron, but knowing how you feel about dots, everyone agreed it wouldn't matter. The apron is a different type of costuming that might be quite cute. Now, Dot, do you see the chalk lines all over the floor?"

"Yes, ma'am!"

"You are to stand behind this dotted line. Here, I'll make a circle of chalk and you put your feet in the center of it and stay there," Miss Sully said.

Dot was standing in a dot and that satisfied her for a while, but she seemed to be irresistably drawn to the front and center position on the stage. Everytime she spoke or had the chance, she walked to the middle of the floor. She couldn't help it.

"Oh, well," sighed Nancy, after Miss Sully had told Dot for the fifth time to get back to the side of the stage, "a bad dress rehearsal is supposed to mean a good show."

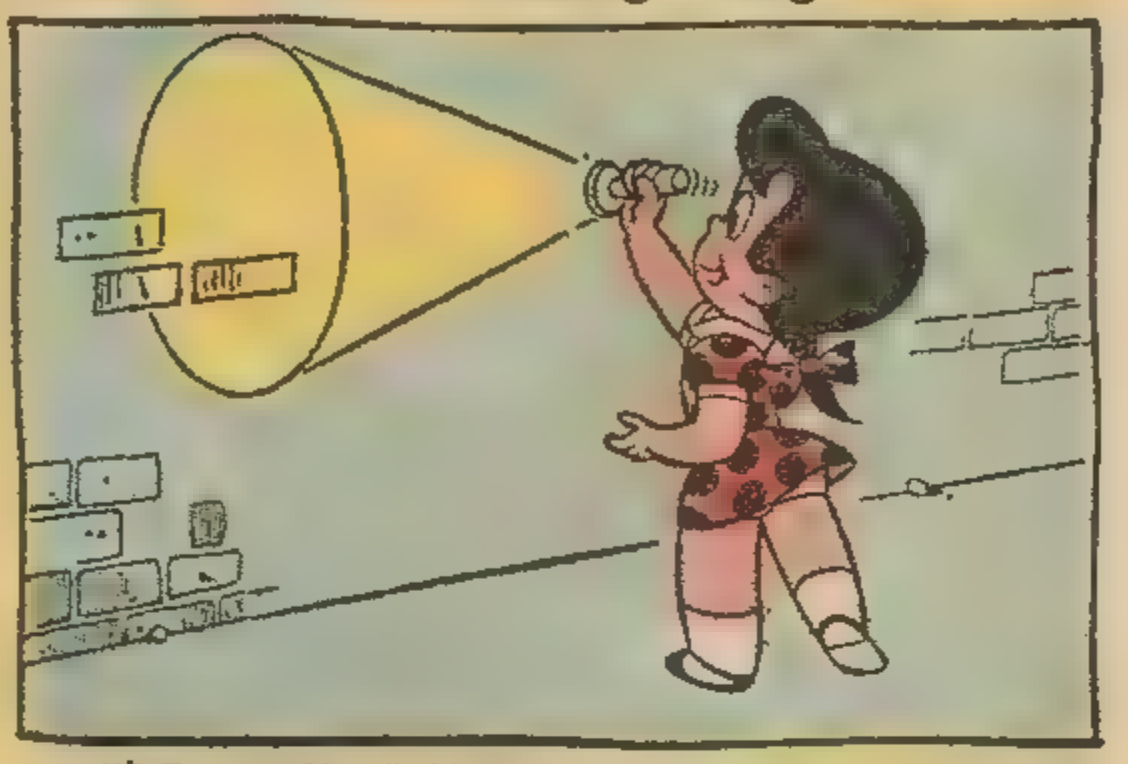
"I hope so," said Matilda. "Dot has surely messed up today's performance."

In the dressing room, nobody spoke to Dot. The members of the cast wished each other good luck and left for the day.

Jimmy caught up with Dot on the way home. "What's the matter with you, Dot? You're not usually a troublemaker!" he said.

"I can't help it, Jimmy. You know how some people eat and eat, when they know they shouldn't?! Well, I just keep going to the middle of the stage. I'll try not to do it tomorrow. Bye and thanks, Jimmy. I know the group is unhappy with me," Dot said.

It was late in the afternoon and dark. Dot took her pocket flashlight out to help her see the slippery spots in the street and to make it easier for passing cars to see her walking along.



"My golly," Dot said to herself. "My flashlight makes a circle or dot of light as I walk along. I can cast it around my feet, if I like. This is just like being in the spotlight on stage. I've got it! I know why I have been stealing the center of the stage today. We used the spotlight for the first time and it made a large moving dot. I just had to be in it. This way, I can make my own spotlinght. What fun!"

A man gave Dot a puzzled glance, as he walked past and heard her talking to herself.

Dot started to skip. "Kids will be kids," the man said out loud to himself and he smiled.

Dot smiled, too, and she smiled the next day and kept her place during the performance. The play was a success and though Dot wasn't in the spotlight, she had found a way to be in it whenever she liked. She just used her flashlight and called it a *Dot*light.

The Curious Cat

Claude was a mighty fine cat. So fine a cat, in fact, was Claude that he only had one really serious flaw. And that was his curiosity . . . his fearful, terrible, all-consuming curiosity. Was there any question to be asked? You could depend on Claude to ask it. Was there any place to explore? You could depend on Claude to explore it. Was there anything to sniff, to taste, to touch? You could depend on Claude to sniff and taste and touch it.

"Your curiosity will get you into a mess of trouble one fine day!" his friends always warned him.

But Claude would only laugh at their warnings, and go merrily on his curious way, poking into places he didn't belong in, seeking information that was none of his business.

"Where are you going?" he would ask inquisitively of anyone who passed him on the street. "Why are you going there? Where are you coming from? Why did you leave there?" No snub hurt his feelings or quieted him down. "That's a lovely hat," he might say. "Where did you buy it? How much did it cost?" And so on and so on and so on.

Or else he would go curiosity-hunting by himself. He peered into open manholes to see what was going on . . . and nearly fell in himself. He trotted around the supermarket, sniffing at the shoppers' packages to see what they had bought . . . and was usually rewarded with a slap for his pains. He climbed up ladders and scampered up trees . . . once he stuck his head in a bucket of paint to see what color paint it was . . . he pushed and pulled and poked his way into everything to satisfy his awful, ever-present curiosity.

Until the day he discovered the mousetrap. Now, it's a strange thing to relate, but the truth of the matter is that Claude had never in his life seen a mouse, much less a mousetrap. A most unusual situation for a cat, but nonetheless true. And there one day, right in the middle of the street where someone had carelessly discarded it, sat a practically brand-new, shiny mouse-trap. Claude stopped dead in his tracks at the sight of it. What manner of thing was this? His eyes lit up with the joy of discovery.

He walked around the mouse-trap several times. He sniffed at it. He counted every screw. Finally, he put out a paw to touch it, and . . . SNAPP! The trap sprang shut, imprisoning the paw in its sharp teeth of steel!

"Help!" yelled Claude in terror. He struggled wildly to free himself. But it was no use. The teeth bit into him, holding him fast, hurting him cruelly. "Oh, why didn't I listen?" he sobbed. "Everybody warned me something like this would happen! Help! Help! Somebody . . . anybody . . . help!"

But a whole hour passed before anyone heard his cries . . . a long, painful hour which gave Claude plenty of time to think. And when at last his friend Tom Cat rushed to him and freed him from the trap, the very first words out of Claude's mouth were, "I'm cured! Never, ever in my life will I be curious about anything again!"

PIANO PLAYING BLUES

"William! Yoo hoo! William Wallace! You come right in here!"

His mother's voice, clear and definite, echoed in Willy's ears. He knew why she was calling. "Sorry, fellows," he muttered. "I have to go now."

"But you can't go yet!" yelped Larry Hackett. "We're right in the middle of our club meeting!"

"Yeah," chimed in Bud Brady, "and we haven't decided what we're going to do about Janie White's darn party!"

"That's right!" nodded Tim and Tom Watson. They were twins, and they did everything together. They even talked together.

"I'm kind of afraid there's no way out, fellows," Willy began.

"William!" interrupted his mother's voice again. "Are you coming?"

"I've got to go!" Willy said desperately. "See you all tomorrow at Janie's party! Can't be helped, that's all!" And off he ran, racing across the field to his house.

Mrs. Wallace was waiting for him at the door. "You know perfectly well this is your practice hour, William!" she told her son severely. "Now you march right over to that piano and start practicing!"

"Aw, Mom! Do I have to?" Willy protested, for perhaps the millionth time. "Piano playing is for sissies!"

For answer, his mother pointed to the big upright piano in the living room, and, sighing, Willy took his place at the keyboard. How he hated those piano lessons and the practicing that went with them. That kind of stuff was for girls . . . like the party he and his friends were forced to go to the next day. He thought about the party as his fingers wandered over the piano keys. Janie White was in their class at school . . . her mother knew their mothers . . . the boys had to go, whether they liked it or not.

And sure enough, the next afternoon, they were all there at the party . . . Willy, Larry, Bud, and the twins . . . all uncomfortable, all bored with the giggling chatter of the girls. Suddenly, Janie's big brother Jim, a tall, handsome Marine home on leave, appeared. The boys crowded around him, pelting him with questions about the Marines, admiring his stunning uniform and his bulging muscles.

"Okay, okay!" Jim laughed after a while. "No more Marine talk! Let's have some fun!" And with that, he sat down at the White's piano and began pounding out a tune. "Everybody sing!" he grinned.

Willy's mouth fell open. A Marine playing the piano! And enjoying it! The whole party seemed to come to life. Boys and girls crowded around the piano, singing all the old favorites at the top of their lungs. Gone was the boredom, the discomfort! They were all having a wonderful time!

Silently, Willy blessed his mother and swore a private vow never again to neglect his practicing. And aloud he said . . . proudly . . . "Any time you get tired, Jim, I'll take over! I'm a pretty good piano player myself!"
